Searching for Syria - Using Technology for Good

Location: The Forum, Palais I

It was seven years ago this March that our generation's worst humanitarian crisis began. Since then over five million people have been forced to leave their homes, possessions and families to seek shelter throughout the Middle East, Europe, and around the world. Google, UNHCR and R/GA came together to create "Searching for Syria," an innovative way for everyone to explore the top five most common search queries people around the world are asking. This talk takes us behind the scenes and will explore how interactive experiences and technology can be used as a force for good. We'll discuss how this project driven by data, journalism and a strong narrative helped combat empathy fatigue, broke down stereotypes and re-engaged audiences globally.

"Our entire approach to developing this campaign changed when we realized that many of our respondents might not live to see it." This talk will discuss our shared efforts to transform Lilly Oncology brand DTC initiatives - showcasing the breakthrough creative campaigns for Lartruvo and Cyramza that were the result. It will explore the tension between our creative desire to push boundaries and our responsibility to our target audience. We learned that it wasn't about what we had to say to them, but rather the responsibility of what we needed to say for them - empowering the voices of those who need it most... and doing it in a way that set a new creative standard in oncology marketing.

Why are Hollywood's stories and marketing more effective than ours?

Location: The Forum, Palais I

Website: <https://www.canneslions.com/the-festival/programme#/agenda/event/why-are-hollywoods-stories-and-marketing-more-effective-than-ours-e1-32314>

Time: 2:00PM - 2:45PM

Participating Agency: McCann

Let's face it. Hollywood's creativity (usually) outshines that of advertising – not just in creating content but in marketing and distributing that content too. So, it's fair to say that there's a lot that we can learn about the effectiveness of story-telling as well as that of creative content distribution, from Hollywood.

Join FP7 from the MENA region, on a journey into creativity that drives Hollywood's appeal.

In an interactive session (with a few surprise guests), get to learn (and share) creative techniques and content distributions tactics deployed by movies, that are easily applicable for brands, agencies, students and start-ups, along with tips from renowned Hollywood makers and actors.

And hey, who doesn't like a few pop quizzes? Join in!

Questions this session will answer:

What does Hollywood do right when it comes to storytelling and creative content, that we can all learn from when it comes to our craft?

How does Hollywood approach creative content distribution as well as channel planning, consumer journeys and relationship management?

What role should Strategy play in making our work more appealing?

The advertising business – frequently the most creative, non-conformist and influential businesses in the world – is neither as inclusive, nor diverse as the world and people it seeks to engage with. The existing cultural diversity within our industry calls for greater interrogation to fully understand the complex identities of people we want to reach through our messaging.

In this session, McCann Worldgroup will elevate the discussion on the creative and commercial opportunity that the fullest inclusion and representation of LGBTQ has to offer an industry fundamentally founded on the principles of non-conformism, and creativity. We will examine how the LGBTQ identity equips individuals with unique skills to offer the creative industry and the ever-changing audiences we work to affect.

Hill Holliday and Match Group present: "All the Single Ladies: Reaching the Modern, Independent Woman"

Location: Girls Lounge - Martinez Hotel Rooftop
Contact name: Tracy Brady
Time: 12:00PM - 1:00PM
Participating Agency: Hill Holliday

Are we shunning the single woman? A new research study released by Hill Holliday's Origin and Match Group reveals some surprising statistics about women between ages 30-45 who are unmarried and childless. The research examines how they see themselves in advertising and media, their shopping and purchasing habits, and how they position themselves across social, professional and dating profiles. The eye-opening results challenge long-held assumptions about single women and have broad implications for marketers.

Featuring Hill Holliday Chairman & CEO Karen Kaplan and Dr. Helen Fisher, a senior research fellow at the Kinsey Institute and a chief adviser to Match.com, the panel will feature leading marketers in a lively discussion about this vital consumer segment that is influential and growing -- yet often overlooked.

This panel will explore:

- How single women are understood by and portrayed in media & advertising today
- How marketers are evolving their conversation with women, given today's cultural shifts
- How marketers are designing modern experiences that connect their brands with today's unmarried consumer.

The total number of single, unmarried people is continuing to rise, more than half of which are women. This indicates they're a growing, valuable segment. The study specifically focused on this life stage, because it's past the average age of marriage, and is an emotionally rich segment to explore and understand the deeper complexity of singledom today.

Showcase

Start-ups are integral to the industry, but often need guidance on how to position themselves in front of brands and advertisers. Female entrepreneurs in particular represent a significant and often untapped opportunity for brands looking to push their businesses forward, so this year, the fourth-annual Start-up Academy promotes female founders across the global start-up ecosystem.

The Academy identifies technology-enabled companies with the potential to impact the marketing, media, communications and advertising industries, and exposes global brands to an expanded pool of innovative solutions.

Over the course of the week, Cannes Lions in partnership with pioneering global digital agency, R/GA, has helped 10 game-changing female-founded start-ups sharpen their brand identity, focus business plans, and, ultimately, market themselves more effectively.

In this culminating showcase, you'll hear from some of the world's most innovative start-ups in the marketing communications space and see what the next generation of thought leadership has to offer.

Questions this session will answer:

Who are some of the world's most innovative start-ups in the marketing communications space?

What are some of the latest tech innovations from around the world you should be paying attention to?

Who are the people behind them?
